ONLY 37 1/2 MILES TO GO . . . After he leaves his classes at El Camino College, Freshman Ray Lyons rides his bicycle to downtown Los Angeles to work and back to his Inglewood home. He makes a daily 42-mile circuit to school to work to home. Married and the father of two children, he is working on his associate of arts degree.

Busy El Camino Freshman Rides Bike 42 Miles Daily

Reducing salons will get no business from Ray Lyons, 21-year-old El Camino College freshman, whose family-college-work schedule takes him over 42 miles of crowded highway daily — via bicycle. Carrying a six-unit program at El Camino during morning hours, Lyons, who rides his bike four hours daily en route to class and work, is married and has two children, a two and one half year old son, and a daughter, four months old. After his last class at 12:20 p.m. daily, Lyons mounts his bike for a quick trip home to Inglewood, where he lives with his young family. Avoids Freeways Lyons' next ride takes him along the long stretch of road to downtown Los Angeles, where he works as a printer for a metropolitan daily. He avoids the freeway route "because it is faster and safer to bypass the speedways." Lyons' reason for his extensive bicycling is to the point. "It is the cheapest form of transportation," he says. Like other married students with four years of education ahead, he is mindful of economy. "I'm making up credits now to get my high school diploma," the slender student declares. "When I finish that work, I have a long road of college work ahead, as I hope to enter the ministry eventually." Resumed Schooling A deep appreciation for the community college results from the fact that Lyons was refused admittance to a number of schools before enrolling at El Camino. He is one of many students who realized the full significance of education after dropping from high school. "About half of the students in the courses I am taking seem to fall in my classification this summer," he said. The community college, in many instances, is the only answer for education achievement for Lyons. Many Jobs A native of Shreveport, La., Lyons last attended school in 1952. Since then, he has tried his hand at farming, chicken raising, carpentry, and other jobs. He completed a six-year apprenticeship in printing in half the usual time and has worked for newspapers in Louisiana, Iowa, and Texas, as well as in California. The student is a radio operator in the Army Reserves. On completion of work at El Camino, the husband-father-student-printer-reservist hopes to continue his education at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Schulke, 1st President of Church, Dies

Ferdinand Lewis "Spike" Schulke, builder and president of Ascension Lutheran Church, died Thursday in Bay Cities Hospital after a heart attack. He was 58. Co-owner of the Spike Construction Co., Inglewood, he had built some 40 churches in Los Angeles and Orange Counties. He helped to found Ascension Lutheran Church, 18002 Prairie Ave., and served as its builder in 1955. He was a charter elder, organizer of the church's bowling league, and was its first and only president. Funeral rites were held Monday in the church, under the direction of Hardin and Flanagan Mortuary, Inglewood. Officiating were Pastors L. E. Werneke of Ascension Church and R. W. Dierker, Good Shepherd Church, Inglewood. Burial was in Inglewood Park. Born in Nebraska, Mr. Schulke came to California 44 years ago. He lived at 4312 Manhattan Beach Blvd., Lawndale. Survivors include his widow, Olga; son Don Schulke, Lawndale; brother, Albert Schulke, Texas; sisters, Mmes. Mena Siegrist, Colorado, Laura Johnson, Theresa Haskett, Kansas; and two grandchildren. SNAKE SPECIES There are at least 13 different species of the rattlesnake in the U.S.
